After School at Franklin

by Belicia Pinkrah, Grade 12

For many elementary schoolers, staying after school usually means staying until dusk before getting picked up by parents coming home late from work. However, at Franklin Elementary School, staying after school also means learning essential literacy skills in a fun and engaging way. During the month of November,

Franklin had expanded their previous after school program with their two coordinators, Ms. Nelson and Ms. Santoro, who run the after school and reading programs, respectively. The program they came up with is called Beyond the Bell. Targeted towards students in grades 1-4, not only are important reading skills enforced, but math and STEM activities, homework help, and snacks are available during those four days a week. The program proves to be especially beneficial during a time where
